More Details for: Reorienting the East : Jewish travelers

Martin Jacob's Reorienting the East: Jewish Travelers to the Medieval Muslim World seeks to explore "what constitutes and informs medieval Jewish travel literature about the Islamic world" and demonstrate that Jewish travel writing problematizes the "clearly defined" notions of "East" and "West" that inform much of the historiography on medieval Christian travel literature (2). Given that most Jewish travel writers hailed from Europe and journeyed to Islamic lands during the Crusader period ...

Overall, Reorienting the East makes a valuable contribution to medieval Jewish history and culture, Jewish-Muslim relations, medieval travel writing, and postcolonial studies of the Middle Ages. One minor shortcoming is in Chapter 10, which suffers in some places (the discussion of the Assassins and Druze) from a paucity of textual evidence.
